Part 3 of the Bill seeks to criminalize offences that are prohibited under certain conventions that have been described as counter-terrorism conventions. Paragraph 3(e) of Resolution 1373 mandates States to fully implement these international conventions and protocols relating to terrorism. These twelve conventions are listed in clause 2 of the Bill under the definition “convention”.

Clause 16 seeks to implement the Convention for the Suppression of Unlawful Acts against the Safety of Maritime Navigation, done at Rome on 10th March, 1988. This clause would prohibit certain acts that would endanger the safety of maritime navigation in respect of any ship registered in Trinidad and Tobago or within the territorial waters of Trinidad and Tobago. The penalty for commission of this offence would be imprisonment for twenty years, however, if the death of a person results from any of the prohibited acts, the penalty upon conviction would be death.

Clause 17 seeks to implement the Convention for the Suppression of Terrorist Bombings, adopted by the United Nations on 15th December, 1997. This clause would make it an offence to deliver, place, discharge or detonate an explosive or other lethal device into a public place, state or government facility, public transport facility or an infrastructure facility with the intent to cause death or serious bodily injury or with the intent to cause extensive damage or destruction of the place or facility which would result in major economic loss. The penalty of commission of this offence would be imprisonment for life.

Clause 18 would implement the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of Crimes against Internationally Protected Persons, including Diplomatic Agents, adopted by the United Nations on 14th December, 1973 thereby prohibiting the murdering or kidnapping of an internationally protected person. This clause would also prohibit any attack on the person or liberty of an internationally protected person, the penalty would vary according to the gravity of the attack. Several other offences are established in this clause, which seek to prohibit the destruction or damage to the residence or official premises of an internationally protected person.

The penalty for the commission of any of these offences would be a fine of one million dollars and imprisonment for twenty years. Where death results from the commission of the offence, the penalty would be death.

Clause 20 seeks to establish offences relating to the use and acquisition of radioactive materials or designs for the purpose of causing death, serious bodily injury or damage to property or the environment. This clause seeks to give effect to the Convention on the Physical Protection of Nuclear Material, adopted at Vienna on 3rd March, 1980. A person convicted of any offence under this clause would be liable to imprisonment for life.

Clause 21 would prohibit hoaxes involving noxious substances, noxious thing, lethal device or weapon of mass destruction. The penalty for the commission of an offence under this clause would be imprisonment for fifteen years. The court would be empowered to order the offender to reimburse any party incurring expenses incident to any emergency or investigative response to the hoax.

Clause 22 would proscribe the use of chemical, biological or nuclear weapons against a citizen of Trinidad and Tobago or a person ordinarily resident in Trinidad and Tobago while the person is outside Trinidad and Tobago, against any person within Trinidad and Tobago or against property in Trinidad and Tobago. The penalty for the commission of this offence would be imprisonment for life.

Part 4 of the Bill deals with the investigation of offences

Clause 23 would authorize a police officer, with the prior written approval of the Attorney General, to apply ex parte to a Judge of the High Court for a detention order, for the purpose of preventing the commission of an offence under this Act. A detention order would only be valid for forty-eight hours in the first instance and may be extended for a period not exceeding five days.
Clause 24 would empower a police officer of the rank of Inspector or above, with the prior written approval of the Director of Public Prosecutions to apply ex parte to a Judge of the High Court for an order for the gathering of information. An order would be granted where there are reasonable grounds to believe that an offence under this Act has been committed and that the information sought may reveal the whereabouts of the offender. This clause further provides for the procedural aspects of the order, the powers of the court and the rights of the person named in the order to defend himself.

Part 5 of the Act deals with jurisdiction and the trial of offences.

Clause 25 delimits the jurisdiction of the courts of Trinidad and Tobago in respect of any of the offences referred in the Bill. Where the Minister receives information that an alleged offender may be present in Trinidad and Tobago, this clause would mandate the Minister to order an investigation to be conducted and to inform any foreign State, which may also have jurisdiction, of the findings, and to indicate any intention to prosecute. If the alleged offender has been taken into custody either for eventual prosecution or surrender to a foreign State, the Minister would be required to inform the relevant State.

Clause 26 would make the provisions of the Extradition (Commonwealth and Foreign Territories) Act, 1985 applicable in respect of surrender under clause 25.

Clause 27 would allow the certificate purporting to be signed by the appropriate authority that a thing or substance is a weapon or a hazardous, noxious, radioactive or harmful substance to be admissible in evidence as proof of the facts stated therein, in the absence of evidence to the contrary.

Part 6 deals with information sharing, extradition and mutual assistance in criminal matters.

Clause 28 would allow the Minister after consultation with the Attorney General, to accede to requests from the appropriate authority of a foreign State, for information relating to terrorist groups or terrorist activities. The disclosure, however, should not be prejudicial to national security or public safety.

Clause 29 would enable treaties to which Trinidad and Tobago is party, to be used as the basis for extradition in respect of offences falling within the scope of those treaties.

Clause 30 would enable treaties to which Trinidad and Tobago is party, to be used as the basis for mutual legal assistance in criminal matters in respect of offences falling within the scope of those treaties.
Clause 31 would establish a proviso that offences under this Act would be deemed not to be offences of a political character for the purposes of the Extradition Act and Mutual Assistance in Criminal Matters Act.

Part 7 of the Act addresses disclosure and sharing of information. Clause 32 would impose a duty on every person to disclose any information, which would assist in the prevention of the commission a terrorist act, or securing the arrest and prosecution of the offender. No civil or criminal proceedings would lie against any person for disclosing information in good faith. The penalty for failure to disclose would be imprisonment for two years.

Clause 33 would impose a duty on a person to disclose to the Minister any information relating to terrorist property in his possession or which to his knowledge is terrorist property or which there are reasonable grounds to believe is terrorist property. The Minister would be required to disclose any information received to the appropriate authority. Every financial institution would be required to report every three months to the Designated Authority that it is not in possession of control of terrorist property or if it is, the particulars relating to the transaction. No civil or criminal proceedings would lie against any person for disclosing information in good faith. The penalty for failure would be imprisonment for five years.

Part 8 deals with seizure and forfeiture of property. Clause 34 would empower any customs officer, immigration officer or police officer to apply to a judge in Chambers for a restraint order in respect of property he has reasonable grounds to believe is intended for use in the commission of a terrorist act or that the property is terrorist property. The restraint order would be valid for a period of sixty days and would be renewable upon application to a judge. The judge would be empowered to release the property under certain circumstances. No civil or criminal proceedings would lie against an officer for a seizure of property made in good faith.

Clause 35 would enable the forfeiture of property used in the commission of terrorist acts or property obtained as proceeds of crime where a person has been convicted of a terrorist offence. The property would be forfeited to the State. Persons who have an interest in the property would be given an opportunity to be heard before the forfeiture order is made.

Clause 36 would empower the Director of Public Prosecutions to apply to a judge in Chambers, where he has reasonable grounds to believe that there is property in a building, place or vessel in respect of which a forfeiture order may be made under clause 37, for a warrant authorizing a police officer to search for and seize the property, if found. The Director of Public Prosecutions would also be empowered to apply for a restraint order to prevent any person from disposing of or otherwise dealing with any interest in that property. The judge would be empowered to make certain orders in respect of the property as required.

Clause 37 would enable the Attorney General to apply to judge of the High Court for an order of forfeiture in respect of terrorist property. Any person who has an interest in the property would be notified and would be entitled to be a respondent to the application. Any interested party who has not been notified would be entitled to apply to the High Court to vary or set aside the order within sixty days of its making.

Clause 38 would allow Trinidad and Tobago to share the property forfeited under this Act with another State pursuant to any existing agreements. The property would be utilized to compensate victims of offences under this Act.

Part 10 of the Bill contains miscellaneous provisions. Clause 39 would impose a duty on the operator of an aircraft or the master of a vessel departing from Trinidad and Tobago, or on the operator of an aircraft or master of a vessel registered in Trinidad and Tobago but departing from another place, to provide information, to the Chief Immigration Officer, relating to the passengers on board, or those persons expected to be on board, or any other information as required under the Regulations.

Clause 40 would enable the Minister to refuse a refugee application, on the basis of national security and public safety, if he has reasonable grounds to believe that the applicant has committed a terrorist act, is or likely to be involved in the commission of a terrorist act.

Clause 41 would empower the Minister to make Regulations for the administration of the Act, and these Regulations would be subject to a negative resolution of Parliament.
