

THE SPECIAL OPERATIONS BILL, 2026

Explanatory Note

(These notes form no part of the Bill but are intended only to indicate its general purport.)

The Special Operations Bill, 2026 (“the Bill”) seeks to establish policing districts within Trinidad and Tobago and to provide for the conduct of special operations to combat criminality in those districts. The Bill provides for the conduct of special operations by police officers with or without military assistance from members of the Defence Force. It empowers the Commissioner of Police (“the Commissioner”) to designate Heads of Special Operations in each district. The Chief of Defence Staff is also empowered to appoint Heads of Military Assistance in each district. All police officers conducting special operations, and all members of the Defence Force providing military assistance, are to be trained in human rights, the use of force, community engagement and conflict de-escalation. The Bill also requires the submission of monthly reports on special operations and the provision of military assistance to the Prime Minister, the Minister with responsibility for the Police Service (“the Minister”) and the Minister with responsibility for defence. The Bill further requires that the Prime Minister lay an annual report on special operations and the provision of military assistance before Parliament. Additionally, the Bill mandates the creation of joint protocols and separate standard operating procedures to guide collaboration between police officers and members of the Defence Force in the conduct of special operations and the provision of military assistance.

The Bill provides for the declaration of closed areas within districts where the presence of violent crime, gang activity or illegal weapons threatens public safety and where ordinary law enforcement measures are insufficient to maintain or restore public safety and peace. The Bill also provides for the imposition of certain restrictions and controls within a closed area, including the imposition of cordons and curfews and the need to obtain permits to enter or leave the closed area. Additionally, the Bill seeks to equip police officers with enhanced powers of search, seizure, arrest and detention, subject to judicial oversight. The Bill contains several safeguards to protect the rights of citizens, including the requirement for police officers and members of the Defence Force to use body-worn cameras within closed areas, the registration of weapons, and the recording of complaints. Detainees are to be afforded medical care and visitation rights. The Bill also creates criminal offences for obstructing officers and breaching curfew or permit conditions.

The Bill contains twenty-six clauses and a Schedule.

Part I – Preliminary

Clause 1 of the Bill provides the short title of the proposed Act (“the Act”).

Clause 2 of the Bill provides for the Act to come into operation on such date as is fixed by the President by Proclamation.

Clause 3 of the Bill provides for the definition of key terms used in the Bill, including the definitions of “closed area”, “cordon”, “district”, “gang”, “gang-related activity”, “police officer”, “Police Service”, “Minister” and “weapon”.

Part II – Policing Districts

Clause 4 of the Bill establishes policing districts in Trinidad and Tobago as set out in the Schedule to the Bill. The clause provides that the island of Trinidad is to be divided into districts comprising one or more municipalities under the Municipal Corporations Act and that the island of Tobago is to be a single district. The clause further empowers the Minister to amend the Schedule by Order subject to negative resolution of Parliament.

Part III – Administration of Special Operations

Clause 5 of the Bill requires the Commissioner to designate a police officer not below the rank of Superintendent as the Head of Special Operations in each district, subject to any objection by the Prime Minister. Before signifying any objection, the Prime Minister must consult the Minister, the Minister with responsibility for defence and the Chief of Defence Staff.

Clause 6 of the Bill authorises the Commissioner to assign to each Head of Special Operations such police officers as he deems fit and proper to participate in special operations under the proposed Act, subject to the abovementioned training requirements.

Clause 7 of the Bill requires the Chief of Defence Staff to designate a member of the Defence Force not below the rank of Major as the Head of Military Assistance in each district, subject to any objection by the Prime Minister. Before signifying any objection, the Prime Minister must consult the Minister, the Minister with responsibility for defence and the Commissioner. Each Head of Military Assistance is to be responsible for, and in charge of, the provision of military assistance in support of the conduct of special operations. Military assistance is only to be provided when requested by the Commissioner. The clause requires the Chief of Defence Staff to assign to each Head of Military Assistance such members of the Defence Force as he considers fit and proper to provide military assistance in support of the conduct of special operations in each district.

Clause 8 of the Bill requires a Head of Special Operations and a Head of Military Assistance, within seven days after the end of each month, to submit a monthly report on the special operations conducted by him or the military assistance provided under his command, as the case may be, to the Commissioner or Chief of Defence Staff, respectively. Within three days of receiving the report, the Commissioner or the Chief of Defence Staff, as the case may be, is required to forward a copy of the report to the Prime Minister, the Minister and the Minister with responsibility for defence. The clause also provides that a report must address such matters and contain such information as may be determined by the Prime Minister after consultation with the Minister, the Minister with responsibility for defence and the Commissioner or Chief of Defence Staff, as the case may be. The clause further provides that a person who fails to comply with the reporting requirements is liable to face disciplinary action. The Prime Minister is required to lay an annual report on special operations and military assistance before Parliament within three months after the end of each calendar year.

Clause 9 of the Bill requires the Commissioner and the Chief of Defence Staff to establish joint protocols for police and military collaboration in the conduct of special operations. It also requires the Commissioner to establish standard operating procedures for the conduct of special operations and the Chief of Defence Staff to establish standard operating procedures for the provision of military assistance by members of the Defence Force.

Additionally, the clause provides that any police officer or member of the Defence Force who fails to comply with any protocol or standard operating procedure is liable to face disciplinary action.

Clause 10 of the Bill authorises the Head of Special Operations in a district to conduct special operations in that district with or without the assistance of the Defence Force, and grants participating police officers the full rights, powers, duties and responsibilities of constables under the Police Service Act.

Part IV – Special Operations in Closed Areas

Clause 11 of the Bill empowers the President to declare, by Order subject to negative resolution of the House of Representatives, any area within a district to be a closed area if public safety and peace are threatened by escalating violent crime or gang-related activity, the prevalence of illegal firearms, ammunition or other weapons or explosives, or the control or intimidation of a local community by a gang and if the President is satisfied that ordinary law enforcement measures are insufficient to restore public safety and peace in that area. It also requires the President, within seven days from the date on which the Order was made, to deliver a statement to the Speaker for presentation to the House of Representatives setting out the grounds upon which the Order was based. It further provides that the Order may be annulled by resolution of the House of Representatives or revoked by the President at any time. An Order under this clause may be enforced by the relevant Head of Special Operations through the use of barriers, roadblocks or other methods.

Clause 12 of the Bill prohibits persons from entering or leaving a closed area without a permit for entry or exit. However, the requirement for a permit does not apply to specified officials, the Head of Special Operations or the Head of Military Assistance responsible for the closed area and any police officer or member of the Defence Force on duty or proceeding to or from duty. The clause also authorises the Commissioner to issue, by notice published in the Gazette, a permit granting permission to enter or leave a closed area to any class or category of persons. It further provides for the Commissioner, Chief of Defence Staff or any Head of Special Operations or Head of Military Assistance to issue permits granting permission to any person to enter or leave a closed area, subject to such conditions and restrictions as may be specified. Additionally, the clause provides for the suspension and cancellation of such permits and creates an offence for the failure to comply with the requirement to obtain a permit or any condition or restriction attached to a permit.

Clause 13 of the Bill authorises a Head of Special Operations to establish a cordon in a closed area, using barriers or roadblocks or other methods, and requires a notice of the establishment of the cordon, its boundaries and requirements to be published by any means and displayed in several conspicuous locations in and around the cordon. The notice must be in the form approved by the Commissioner and must be published in the Gazette within three days after its issuance. The clause also requires persons, other than exempted persons, to obtain a permit to enter or exit an area within a cordon. Additionally, the clause empowers the Commissioner, Chief of Defence Staff, Heads of Special Operations and Heads of Military Assistance to issue, suspend or cancel such permits, and creates an offence for the failure to comply with the requirement to obtain a permit or any condition or restriction attached to a permit.

Clause 14 of the Bill empowers the President, to impose, by Order subject to negative resolution of the House of Representatives, a curfew in a closed area, thereby requiring persons within that area to remain in their premises during specified hours unless authorised by a permit. It also provides for the issue, suspension and cancellation of such permits and for the exemption of specified officials and police officers and members of the Defence Force when on duty or proceeding to or from duty, from the requirement to obtain a permit. The clause further provides for an Order imposing a curfew in a closed area to be annulled by the House of Representatives or revoked by the President at any time. Additionally, the clause creates an offence for the contravention of an Order made under this clause and for the failure to comply with any condition or restriction attached to a permit issued under this clause.

Clause 15 of the Bill authorises a police officer conducting special operations in a closed area to search any place, vehicle or person without a warrant upon reasonable suspicion that an offence is being committed or has been committed or is about to be committed. It also requires the police officer in charge of a search to take reasonable steps to ensure the attendance during all stages of the search, of the owner or occupier of the place, the owner or person in possession of a vehicle, or the agent of any such person, and to ensure that such persons are afforded every opportunity to observe everything done in relation to the search and that female persons are searched only by female officers. It further provides that a police officer may seize any vehicle, article or document that may be useful for preventing disorder or may be of substantial value to the investigation of any offence. Additionally, the clause prohibits the seizure of any tool of lawful trade or items protected by legal privilege, and requires the police officer in charge of the search to compile a list of seized items and provide a receipt to the owner or person in possession of the seized vehicle, article or document or the agent of the owner or person in possession of the vehicle, article or document, as soon as possible.

Clause 16 of the Bill provides that any vehicle, article or document seized during a search must be secured in a place and in the custody of a person approved by the Commissioner, and must be returned when no longer needed for public order or evidential purposes. The clause also provides for applications to be made to a Magistrate for the return of a vehicle, document or article seized, and requires a Magistrate to order its release if satisfied that there are no reasonable grounds for its retention.

Clause 17 of the Bill provides for the arrest and detention of persons during a special operation in a closed area. The clause requires a Head of Special Operations to be satisfied that there are reasonable grounds for suspecting that a person has committed or is in the course of committing or is about to commit an offence before he can be arrested or detained. A person who is arrested or detained must be promptly informed of the reasons for his arrest or detention in a language he understands and he must be brought before a Magistrate to determine whether there are reasonable grounds for his detention. The clause also provides that a Magistrate may authorise that a person be remanded in custody for up to forty-eight hours after which he must be taken before a High Court Judge, who may order his continued arrest or detention if reasonably required in the interest of justice or his immediate release. Additionally, the clause provides that the same powers of arrest and detention under this clause apply to persons fleeing a closed area.

Clause 18 of the Bill creates an offence for threatening, assaulting, obstructing or hindering a police officer, member of the Defence Force or any other person performing duties under the proposed Act.

Clause 19 of the Bill provides that where a person remains in custody for thirty-six hours and no Order is made by a Magistrate for the person to be remanded in custody and to be taken before a High Court Judge after forty-eight hours, the officer in charge of the police station must notify an officer not below the rank of Assistant Superintendent (“the prescribed officer”) and record in the station diary the fact that the prescribed officer has been so informed. It further provides that upon receipt of that information, the prescribed officer must investigate the circumstances of the case and cause the person to be brought immediately before a Magistrate.

Clause 20 of the Bill outlines the treatment of persons arrested or detained during special operations in closed areas, including requiring that all complaints made by or concerning such persons be recorded in the station diary and allowing visits during such times as may be determined by the prescribed officer subject to security and safety considerations. It also provides that a person detained or arrested may receive visits from his spouse, cohabitant, family member, Attorney-at-law or a medical practitioner and requires details of each visit to be recorded in the station diary. The clause further provides that a person arrested or detained is permitted to receive food, clothing and other items necessary for his health and welfare, but is prohibited from receiving anything that could endanger his health or safety or the safety of any officer or other person. Additionally, the clause provides that where any person who is arrested or detained appears ill or requires medical attention, a police officer in charge of the supervision of the person must promptly cause the person to receive medical attention, whether or not he complains of illness.

Clause 21 of the Bill requires police officers and members of the Defence Force, as far as possible having regard to available resources, to use body-worn cameras during special operations in closed areas. It also requires the Commissioner and Chief of Defence Staff to establish and review joint protocols and procedures governing the use of body-worn cameras in closed areas. Further, the clause restricts access to body-worn camera data to oversight and investigative agencies, including the Police Service Commission, the Police Complaints Authority, internal police investigative units, the Director of Public Prosecutions and the Office of the Ombudsman. Additionally, the clause provides that any police officer or member of the Defence Force who fails to comply with any protocol or standard operating procedure is liable to face disciplinary action.

Clause 22 of the Bill requires that all weapons, including their ballistic signatures, and ammunition assigned to police officers and members of the Defence Force involved in special operations, be registered with the Trinidad and Tobago Forensic Science Centre before the conduct of special operations in a closed area, unless otherwise directed by the Commissioner or Chief of Defence Staff, as the case may be.

Clause 23 of the Bill empowers a police officer to require a person within a closed area to disclose his full and correct name, including any alias, and address, if the police officer suspects that the person has committed or is committing or is about to commit an offence or if that person may assist in the investigation of an offence. The clause also creates an offence for failing to comply by giving a name that is false in a material particular or giving an incorrect address without reasonable excuse.

Part V – Miscellaneous

Clause 24 of the Bill requires the Commissioner and the Chief of Defence Staff to make arrangements for applications for permits under the proposed Act to be submitted both manually and electronically.

Clause 25 of the Bill empowers the Minister to make regulations for the administration of the proposed Act.
